Dear Sylvia,

Turn your attention for a moment away from problems of cholera and small pox in India and other afflictions in other places and give thought to an idea which insinuated itself, like a microbe, into my mind following our conversation last night in which you told me about the seminar on assassinations planned for Thanksgiving weekend at Georgetown University. I think I would like to approach the sponsors with a request for opportunity to present views which I have not been able to have published. My impulse is to say frankly I want to present a Marxist interpretation of the assassinations or at least those of JFK and MLK.

What do you think of the idea generally? And of my specific approach? And should I send material I have written with the request?

Until a week from Thursday.
Thomas
