Dear Lillian,

It was good to hear from you today, after such a long time. After your call, I checked the original source from which I had quoted in my article, which states:

The tree between him and the President offere (one or two words at the end of the line missing because of apparent fold in the paper when it was xeroxed; the sentence continues on top of next page) which made the firing more difficult.

You will note that the "d" in the word "offered" was not captured by the xerox machine. From the small amount of space available at the end of the line, I would deduce that the missing words were "...offered an obstacle which made the firing more difficult."

Since the source document does not add anything to the excerpt quoted in my TMO article, I am writing rather than phoning you back.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
