

Rules for the Resolution of Conflicts between LUN Staff Members

- ✓ 1. The Director is always in the right, by definition. ✓
- ✓ 2. Visitors from Headquarters are always in the right, except in those cases when they differ with the Director (see Rule 1). At such times, the secretarial staff is in the wrong.
3. Disputes arising between the Administrative Assistant and the Junior Secretary will be referred to the Post Office for arbitration.
4. Disputes arising between either the Administrative Assistant or the Junior Secretary and any other staff member are ascribable solely to the ill-humour of the other staff member.
5. Disputes between the Junior Liaison Officer and any other staff member had better not arise.
6. In any dispute arising between the Documents Officer and any other staff member, except the Director, on an issue of fact, the Documents Officer is in the right.
7. If a similar dispute arises between the Documents Officer and the Director (see Rule 1), the Director has been misinformed by his Secretary.
8. In any dispute arising between the Public Information Officer and his Secretary, his Secretary is in the right, and the Public Information Officer knows it.
9. In any dispute arising between the Director and his Secretary, the latter is guilty either of insubordination, sabotage, unreasonableness, faulty memory, prevarication, inattention, laziness or native stupidity, or a combination of these, but she will be forgiven.
10. Headquarters is always in the wrong, except in those cases when it is completely confused.
