Dear Sylvia,

A friend sent me the cutting from Newsday. In other articles that I've read over the last month or two, Recessions, 6 Seconds, and Inquest are the 3 hubs that are mentioned most often. Apparently, we've at least established a place for ourselves in the literature.

I found that Washington comes awfully depressing. I don't know what I expected, but it left a stale odor in my nostrils -- the odor of that huge, partly empty room, and the perfunctory investigations that couldn't fill it. The next day there was a slightly ludicrous rebellion led by Spolmes of Chicago surrounded by a group of young paranoids desperately looking to him for guidance and leadership. I was reminded of Solovitch.

Well, old friend, it was good to see each other and talk as we did. Let's do it again soon.

Affectionately,
David
