

ABOUT "LINCOLN LAWRENCE"

Lincoln Lawrence (under his own name) has written for newspapers, magazines, and broadcast media for over 25 years.

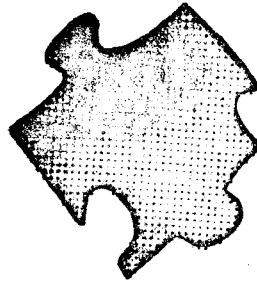

He has been a network news TV commentator.

He has a vast number of important information sources in Washington and New York.

At the time of the assassination he was working on a project (for a highly respected American organization) which called for the active participation of President John F. Kennedy. Towards this end, he was working in liaison with the Department of Defense.

Shocked by the news from Dallas, and unsatisfied with the printed accounts . . . he worked quietly behind-the-scenes for almost three years preparing this analysis of what he feels, in the cold light of the future, will be considered the most challenging of all the rumors about the tragedy.

In no sense does he feel he is proving a conspiracy (he avoids the word in the book) . . . but rather . . . as the title implies . . . simply examining the structure . . . of a rumor. A rumor, so deadly in its implications, that Lincoln Lawrence felt it could not be ignored!
