Dear Mary,

My good friend Leo Sauvage will be in Dallas from Friday the 20th of October until Wednesday the 25th, on a story for Le Figaro which is unrelated to the assassination. At the same time, however, he would like to put together some material for a story on 11/22/72, the ninth anniversary.

I have taken the liberty of giving Leo your phone number and he will call you upon arrival. You are the one person in Dallas who has total command of the evidence and the witnesses, to say nothing of your extensive archives, and I feel sure you will enjoy a chance to meet Leo. He has the most logical and razor-like mind of all the critics, and the most searing pen.

If I have not written to you for some time, it is because I have been ill for the last four months, much of which I spent in hospital. I will save the gory details for a future letter or phone-call. Meanwhile, best affection to you and to all your family.

Yours ever,
