Dear Dr. Albizu Campos,

Can you please do me a huge favour? There was a story in the New York Times on Tuesday to the effect that balloons landed in Cuba which discharged a gelatinous substances which melted and disappeared and which Dr. Castro was an attempt at germ warfare. Do you have any information, from the Cuban newspapers or other sources, which gives a detailed description of the balloons and the gelatinous substance? I have a long personal interest in so-called "unidentified flying objects" or "flying saucers" and I should like to compare the balloons which fell over Cuba with similar occurrences in other countries which have been reported over many years, from time to time. I would be interested to know if this "jelly" had any colour, or any odour, and any other available details.

With kindest personal regards,

Sincerely yours,

Sylvia Meagher
