Dear Tom,

I appreciate your letter of the 14th ("A Warning") but I am not unduly concerned about whether Garrison said "manhole" or "sewer" on WFAA-TV, since he has succeeded merely in being comical, either way. From other sources of information, I know that he is now enamored of the ancient theory—first advocated by Lillian Castellano, I believe—of assassins shooting from the sewers and escaping through the underground network of drains. He changes theories as often as I change linens, growing less responsible (if that is possible) with each public utterance. What a buffoon.

I tried to phone you one evening but discovered that you now have an unlisted number.

I hope that you and Mrs. Stama are well. Do give me a call one evening when you have time to chat.

Best wishes,
