TRIAL OPENS TODAY ON KENNEDY 'PLOT'

Special to The New York Times

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8—Dean A. Andrews Jr., a New Orleans lawyer who has said, "I'll be the only person ever convicted in the assassination of President Kennedy and I don't know beans about it," will go on trial for perjury here tomorrow.

Mr. Andrews was charged with perjury after he told a grand jury that he could not identify Clay L. Shaw, a retired businessman, as the "Clay Bertrand" who for several years had hired him by telephone to defend homosexuals in court.

Perry Raymond Russo, an insurance salesman, told the grand jury that he had heard Mr. Shaw, using the name Clay Bertrand, and David W. Ferrie, a pilot, plotting Mr. Kennedy's assassination.

Mr. Russo said in Baton Rouge, La., yesterday that he had heard Mr. Ferrie, who is called the central figure in the assassination by District Attorney Jim Garrison, talk about murdering former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Adolfo Lopez Mateo, the former President of Mexico.
