

7 September 1968

Dear Bob,

I am working in the phoneless lower depths just now at a Conference of Ministers of Social Welfare, which you should not know from. As I don't want to break into your Saturday, this note...

Phil Singer told me yesterday that his latest bulletin from Grove is that Accessories has moved to the desk of Dick SeEVERS (phonetic spelling) with a recommendation to publish and that any delay now is purely bureaucratic. Jules Galler, who has inherited the book from Mary Heathcote, wants to publish it. Phil suggests that you should push Dick SeEVERS a bit.

I leave it to your judgment.

By the way, just my luck: Tom Bethell phoned me last Sunday night. He had not received your letter, although I had received the copy, and I had to break the bad news to him.

Yours ever,

302 West 12 Street
New York City 10014