ROLE OF NEGROES IN RALLY SMALL

Racism Given Priority Over War and Other Issues

By THOMAS A. JOHNSON Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 9 Stepping across several white youths sprawled on the grass near the Ellipse, Reginald Wilson, a 19-year-old Negro, explained the paucity of black participants in the antiwar rally.

"We have this unfinished business of racism in America," he said. "Black people see the greater need to deal with racism here, before Vietnam, ecology or Cambodia."

Mr. Wilson, a spphomore at Morgan State College in Baltimore, said that several busloads of black students had gone to work in a voter education program in Newark, where black candidates are running for Mayor.

"And you came to the peace demonstration?" the youth was asked.

"No, not really," he said. "I live in Washington and came home for Mother's Day.'

'We're Tired'

A youth who said he was a Black Panther official, and who refused to take a seat that was offered by rally officials on the podium, said angrily:

"We're tired of addressing the student movement. We're tired of seeing the student movement look 2,000 miles away to Vietnam and not look 2,000 feet away in the United States. There's only one directed around her, but they were struggle and these kids are not A few hundred yards from party newspaper and called to the crowd "All power to the people—death to the fascist of the dence, R. I., "if they can learn to go back."

A morice "Source, said an unem- always be there want to go back, dence, R. I., "if they can learn to deal with racism in jobs to show the people—death to the fascist of the people with racism in jobs to show the people was a morice."

pigs."

party buttons.

States. There's only one direction to take, and it's not to wave peace signs when the National Guard is killing students."

States. There's only one direction ner, but they were struggle and these kills are not to take, and it's not to a far smaller group than the in our class," the youth said. "That's it," another black of a rented youth, a draftsman, said. "They can afford to opt out of the truck.

the podium, another black youth, standing atop a red auto, waved a Black Panther bloved black youth from Provi-want to go back.

"Black people and white system for a while because their daddies control it. It will some issues," said an unemalways be there in case they bloved black youth from Provi-want to go back.

pigs."

"It's time to pick up a gun," he added. "All pover to the added. "All pover to the long from the get."

The youth, who sat with black two friends on a bench along need 17th Street, across from the get." two friends on a bench along need every day's pay they can people. Death to the fascist headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, you going to ignore the rally A black girl, using the hood ignored the rally after a nine after the long trip to get here?" of the car as a counter, sold and a half hour drive from cuck. can afford to opt out of the "Black people and white system for a while because

"To tell people to strike their in jobs to show they're against the war is unrealistic in the The youth, who sat with black community. Black people

The youths were asked, "Are

"We come to white rallies to relax," the draftsman said. "We arty buttons.

Providence.

Providence.

Providence.

relax," the draftsman said. "'
Several white youths crowd"We are involved in a class go to black rallies to work."