

Dec. 29, 1967

Dear Sylvia -

You may already have begun on my only suggestion about your great book - I'm on page 198. Could you produce a narrative account of what the hard evidence at this date indicates as the true progress of events and involvement of people? Your knowledge cries out from every page to reach a wider audience - to create an unshushable clamor for the truth - an unignorable demand from the people to know not only in our life time but to know in 1968 the reasons why and the persons who permitted the fiction of the Warren Report. Until we know, this country and everyone in it is an accessory after the fact.

I suggest a narrative account because unfortunately, our national reading habits are such that the vast majority are geared only for pre-digested (over)

information on anything above the comic book level.

Somehow - Someway - we have got to get a new investigation.

Best regards,
Margaret

P.S. - Remember - no reply is necessary.
Your time is the currency of this battle for truth.