

A National Voice for New York . . .
A New York Voice for the Nation

LOWENSTEIN

Al Lowenstein with his son Tommy

"He is an extraordinary man who has performed a magnificent service to our nation."

—Edward I. Koch, December 30, 1970

"Al Lowenstein is a fighter for principle and progress with a broad range of experience on issues of vital concern to all New Yorkers. As a member of Congress in the 1970's I was particularly impressed by his energetic and constructive efforts on such domestic issues as housing and mass transit improvement."

—Deputy Mayor Herman Badillo, June 28, 1978

"Al has been a powerful and unflinching voice on behalf of Israel and Soviet Jewry. Because his influence reaches people who have not always been aware of the facts of these situations, his efforts have been especially valuable."

—Senator Henry Jackson, September 19, 1974

"One of the foundations for Ambassador Lowenstein's many successful crusades has been his concern for justice . . . He has never been content to theorize about justice; to theory he has always joined action."

—Honorary Doctor of Laws Citation,
College of New Rochelle, May 28, 1978

"The case for Lowenstein rests not on negative appraisal of his opponents but on the very special distinction and courage he has exhibited on so many fronts since he entered politics as a youthful supporter of Adlai Stevenson. He has been a citizen of the world who has neither forgotten nor lost his roots in New York and whose presence in Congress could have unusual meaning for the city at this critical moment. He is the embodiment of our best instincts and traditions, that rare political figure who, in Bergson's phrase, acts as a man of thought and thinks as a man of action."

—James Wechsler

United States Representative to the U.N. Human Rights Commission where he succeeded in producing the first Commission discussion of oppression in the Soviet Union.

Chairman of William F. Ryan's (D-N.Y.) successful first campaign for Congress, 1960; Democratic National Committeeman from New York, 1972-76; National Chairman, Students for Stevenson, 1952.

Graduated from primary and secondary schools in New York City; member of a family prominent in business, philanthropic and Zionist affairs; member and officer of numerous religious, community, and cultural organizations.

United States Ambassador to the U.N. for Special Political Affairs, 1977-78; resigned after disagreements with Administration policies in Middle East and elsewhere.

Foreign Policy Assistant to Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, 1959-60; Educational Affairs Assistant to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, A.A.U.N. Educational Program, 1956-57; John F. Kennedy Fellow at Harvard, 1971; Adlai Stevenson Fellow at Choate, 1978.

Al Lowenstein - the Best of New York for New York

Number 7 on Nixon's Enemies List; Co-Chairman, Conference of Concerned Democrats, the national group organized to provide Democratic Party alternatives to the war in Vietnam.

Faculty, City College of New York, Hunter, New School, Yale; affiliated with a leading law firm based in New York City.

A Congressman who sponsored landmark bills, including urban mass transit trust fund, federalization of welfare costs, housing, health, and tax reform programs, prohibition on dumping sludge in the New York Blight. Paid his own way on every overseas trip he took, and provided constituent and community services hailed as among the best ever provided by a Member of Congress.

Winner of a "Distinguished Reporting" Award, Overseas Press Club, 1976, and author of a widely acclaimed book about southern Africa.

We are choosing a member of Congress. The question is: Who would be the most effective representative for New York and the nation in Congress? If we decide by any other yardstick, we shortchange our city and our consciences.
