Dear Mr. Marcus:

I am returning to you Copy 2 of "The Bastard Bullet" which Sylvia Meagher was good enough to forward to me. I am truly and sincerely grateful to you for having given me an opportunity of reading this manuscript. It is an excellent presentation and in certain respects a definitive research work. On the negative side, I think that your chart-like method of presenting various hypotheses towards the end of the manuscript is rather ineffective. I would have each hypothesis discussed rather than charted out. A comprehensive discussion of the various hypotheses, instead of the present device, would, I feel, further add to the value of your paper.

I am not making a suggestion of publishing your study in our pages for two reasons: (1) I feel that Vincent Salandria's discussion of Exhibit 399 in our pages was sufficient for the needs of a magazine; (2) in any case, your study is much too lengthy for inclusion in a magazine. Since it would be very important that your study be published, Sylvia Meagher, in a conversation with me, made what I consider to be the soundest possible suggestion for this type of a monograph: by getting together several monographs on various aspects of the assassination evidence, it should be possible to publish them in book form. I strongly urge you to look around for other monographs with which yours could make up this kind
