Sylvia:

I wrote you a note and then lost it. I guess. Did you get it? If so, this will be a repeat.

You are probably right about the Elsbeth address. Since I am so frequently wrong, I won't argue it. My information (for the most part) comes from Thayer who was at the police station at 2pm when they brought Lee in. As I remember, the depository list was not made up until much later in the afternoon, after there had been communication between the police station and the TSBDB. Truly phoned the 2nd warehouse and got Lee's Irving address around one (not Truly's opinion of the time, but mine); still, as I say, it hardly matters that much.

Nothing new here. I have had a nice chat with Ruth and also have been loaded down with new rumors on her. Isn't it extraordinary what people will say without actual evidence? Have talked to a number of European reporters and also some very nice handsome young men from LA who are to see you this week, I believe. I have promised Penn to get to Dallas in December for my eighth trip, but have had my cold come back in the form of sinus. Don't know when I can get up high in those jets without screaming!

Please keep working and be proud of yourself. You are all doing such good work. Much love,
S.
