Dear Sylvia:

Finished, by God!!! Actually, I'd wound up the typing a few days ago and have spent ever since proof-reading it against our originals. In addition to the expected typos, I found my students had left out almost 40 names. This meant re-typing 40 pp. (and gritting my teeth all the way). But I'm now reasonably certain there~~are~~ are no mistakes -- or few of them anyway. I'm enclosing a separate list of a couple of errata for the individual indexes.

I'm xeroxing off an extra copy of the Master Index for you and will have the Technical Services people here at the university bind it. It should be to you in a couple of days. It should be of use in research until Scarecrow comes out with the final copy.

Any word on Russ Stetler's introduction? If he can't come through, what about asking Paul or Peter Dale Scott?

For now, I plan to throw a good old Irish celebration, take a few days rest, and get into those volumes I haven't read yet. Then I want to have a look at the FBI files which we just received on microfilm. I'm considering your suggestion of having a go at a book, though I'm not sure about what angle.

Better get this off before the post office closes.

With best regards,

Henry

P.S. I FORGOT TO BRING THE ERRATA WITH ME. WILL SEND THEM TOMORROW
