Dear Miss Meagher:

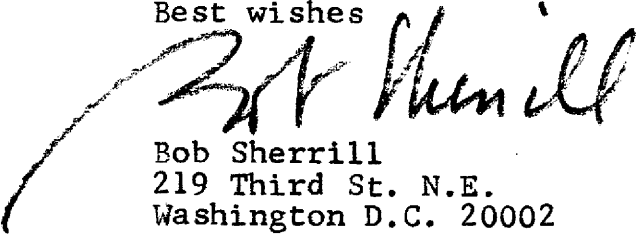

I have just returned from a trip to Texas, and here is your letter waiting, and what a pleasant thing it is.

Naturally I would be very honored to have your book. I'll put my address at the end of this.

Your idea about a book on the "mythification" of JFK's murder is an excellent one, although the topic I have in mind is probably different from the one you have in mind; ~~although~~ I am not sure. I mean the political myth of JFK triggered by his murder. It really needs to be done. But it should be done by someone such as yourself, who can keep cool. I can't; and although I generally get by with what I do to live politicians, I couldn't get by with stealing flowers off a grave, which is what it would amount to, the way I would do it.

And the next time you get down this way, call. My wife and I would certainly like to have you out to our house for lunch. She isn't a buff on the assassination, but she is fairly well read in it and would give you a hero's reception.

Best wishes
