Dear Mr. Koehler,

I am gratified to learn that you have found merit in my book Accessories After The Fact. Such biographical information as my publishers and I deemed to be adequate appears on the book-jacket and I am sorry that I do not have a prepared autobiographical sketch prepared nor the time to write one. I have a full-time career in a field entirely unrelated to the Warren Report and that leaves me little time as it is to continue my research after hours.

In any case, the book and my other published work on the Warren Report constitute the real basis for judging the reliability and independence of my findings, since I have taken every care to cite the sources of the facts set forth in the book and they can easily be verified; while the logic of my arguments and conclusions can be weighed on their merits, in each case.

If you have a specific question that does appear to be germane to to your thesis, I will of course try to be helpful.

Yours very truly,
