Dear Mr. Masterman,

Bobbs-Merrill has recently sent me a copy of your letter of 19 October 1969 to Robert Ockene, who unfortunately has been ill and away from his desk for some time. I assume that Bobbs-Merrill has responded to your request for Accessories. So far as I know, quite a few copies remain unsold. Also, Penn Jones apparently had a supply on hand which he was offering for sale to readers of his Midlothian Mirror (address: Midlothian, Texas), and may still have copies available. Regrettably, I do not myself have a spare copy of the book.

I am, of course, very pleased and heartened by your generous remarks about my book, and I thank you for your kindness in asking that they be conveyed to me. I should mention that the Minority of One ceased publication just about one year ago, closing off one of the very few avenues still open to articles on the Dallas assassination.

It is good to know that at least one researcher in England is still actively at work on the case, and I should be interested to know what lines of inquiry you are pursuing. With all good wishes and renewed thanks for your compliments to Accessories,

Yours sincerely,
