Dear Paris,

It is good to hear from you again. If your plans to spend time in New York should materialize, perhaps we can see each other. I am hoping to rent a house again at Fire Island, for what is called the "long season". If I succeed, I shall be away weekends as well as for a month or more during the summer. At the moment, we are in a lull at my office, which gives us a chance to recover from the crushing workload we experienced from September through mid-February.

The Texas Observer has just accepted a short article I wrote on the JFK autopsy photographs and X-rays. I'll send you a copy when it is published. Otherwise, things seem to be at a stand-still, unless there are activities of which I have not heard.

I can sympathize with your dilemma as to literary representation and I do hope that you will find a solution. Before too long, I expect I too will be coping with the problems of free-lancing in some forms of writing and publishing activities--when I retire from my job at the UN, in about four years. I always enjoyed working at home, but perhaps that was because I had to go to an office eleven months of the year. Contentment is surely elusive! except, of course, for my cat Mimi and her various counterparts. Next incarnation...

With warm personal regards,

Yours sincerely,
