"We of this generation of rocket propulsion and the exploration of space are privileged to see astronomical history made before our eyes—no item, perhaps, as startling as the revelations of Mariner 9. And in this beautiful book, we have the privilege of seeing that historical event through the eyes of experts, before and after."—Isaac Asimov

"One of the most exciting and provocative of aerial voyages. At last someone has brought astronomical imagination and fact into an alluring marriage."

—Ernest K. Gann

"A book of wonders... a fascinating symposium, begun in 1971 as a 'live' panel, continued a year later in writing, and now published with 50 extraordinary full-page photographs. I confess that I'm wild about it; it excites and exhilarates me; it transcends narrow categories of subject matter and is of that sort which may be called mind-stretchers, concept-sowers, or, without drugs, consciousness-expanders."

... Society School, a Real World

by George Richmond

Imagine a school that is organized like society at large—with commercial and savings banks, real estate holdings, stores, courts and universities—and you have The Society School. In this book, the creator of a radical new educational system describes its effects and successes. His imaginative re-creation of a free enterprise system, using play money redeemable for goods, had astonishing results—not only teaching academic skills but uncovering juvenile talent for real estate, banking and investment (not to mention usury and embezzlement). The economic experiment led to a real and rational society with student courts replacing fights, constitutional conventions, newspapers, postal systems, etc. This important book is bound to create a stir in the educational field. 256 pages; index. Inventions Necessity is Not The Mother Of

by Stacy V. Jones

Among the devices described in this book are: an automatic baby-burper that frees the parent of a chore and the baby of gas; an automatic housepainter that moves along the sides of a building; a driverless lawn mower that shuts itself off and garages itself; a rifle with a curved barrel for firing around corners; a golf ball that sends out a smoke signal when it lands to help its owner locate it; an anti-bicycle-thief device that sends a long, sharp needle into the rear end of anyone making off with the bicycle. Some of these ideas never got beyond the paper stage. Some became famous, and made their inventors wealthy. But renowned or obscure, simple or complex, straightforward or bizarre, all are fascinating. 224 pages; 6 x 9; illustrated. (Quad)

Sexual Suicide

by George F. Gilder

Here is a book guaranteed to stir up furious controversy. George F. Gilder, brilliant young economist, has written a cogent and fascinating rebuttal to today's popular feminist ideas. "The androgenous society proposed by the feminists will lead to a sexual suicide society," states Gilder, arguing that the enduring structure of civilization is the family and that its roots are being undermined by widespread endorsements of feminism, pornography, homosexuality, and sexology, "The future of love and the family hang in the balance."

The differentiation of male and female roles is essential to the preservation of civilized society. If this process fails, the control of male aggression becomes a problem to the community as a whole.

These and many other provocative ideas are developed by the author within a broad economic and sociological context. The questions raised are perhaps the most crucial ones society faces today. 224 pages. (Quad)

by Frank Mankiewicz

The melodramatic capture and trial of the burglars, the dirty tricks, the sabotage, the espionage, the cover-up. The black bags, the one-hundred-dollar bills, the fake polls and phone calls, the forged cables. The secret cash funds, the blown safe, the rifling of offices, the destruction of evidence, the compromising of the FBI. Who were these men and what was their view of American politics? Why did the scandal never become an election issue?

Frank Mankiewicz has been a California lawyer. A Washington journalist and an active participant in politics, he is, he says, "one of America's leading Nixon watchers." He was present when the Nixon career began in 1946. He was a classmate at UCLA of both Bob Haldeman and John Ehrlichman. He was on the Democratic ticket with Helen Gahagan Douglas in 1950, investigated the 1952 "Secret Nixon Fund," was Robert Kennedy's press secretary, and was political director of the McGovern campaign in 1972. He has, in his words, both a long and a short memory. (Quad)

November 22, 1963:

You Are the Jury

by David Belin

What was Oswald's destination at the time of the murder of Officer Tippit? Who was a killer of President Kennedy? This book places the reader as juror in solving two murders which occurred on November 22, 1963.

The reader gets the heart of the evidence directly from the witnesses to the events themselves. Contradictions between witnesses and within the testimony of witnesses have been included, as they would be in a courtroom.

While the reader evaluates all of the evidence, he will discover sensationalist techniques used by other authors, distortion-by-omission techniques, and deliberate misstatements of the record.

What is the truth behind Jack Ruby's lie detector test? Is the Warren Commission immune from criticism? How gory is the testimony? What about the possibilities of conspiracy?

Mr. Belin was one of two lawyers hired by the Warren Commission to concentrate in the areas of the assassinations of Tippit and JFK. 400 pages; 6 x 9. (Quad)
