Dear Mr. Lewis,

I have just finished reading your column of today, "One Who Practiced..." which is a superlative analysis and commentary. Indeed, your columns on Watergate and the conduct of the President have been from the first masterly and devastating.

It occurs to me that admiration should not be silent and that I want to express my thanks for your outstanding reportage and insight. If a collection of your Watergate columns could be published, it would constitute an invaluable history and denunciation of an Administration whose pervasive ugliness and moral decay has taken the country perilously close to utter disaster.

With great admiration and all good wishes,

Sincerely yours,
