Dear Sylvia:

Just a note to wrap around this book review, which I finally found only Sunday. I had searched high and low to no avail but I knew it was there somewhere. We did a big house-cleaning and bought some English furniture Saturday and I decided to throw away about half of the clutter and litter around. It turned up in that process.

I certainly enjoyed seeing you, brief though our get-together was, a few weeks ago. Carol Anne was duly envious of our partaking of dinner at the Beatrice. She is not having to work quite as much now, incidentally.

I voted for Mondale at 7:15 this morning on my way to work. There was a good turnout and so I cling to that shred as a hopeful sign. But what can be said further?

This is being dashed off at work and I have to go. More later. Take care and sail one this way...

amigo,

Tom Johnson
