Dear Sylvia,

I've just now sent a letter, as you advised, to Freedom asking them to move up the publication date of my work to _____ the Agency's probable attempts to _____ the publication of it by them. Thanks for the sound advice. I'm such a novice in all of the ramifications and ins and outs, etc, of EVERYTHING involving book publishing, so, at this time of strain and anxiety, naturally, in attempting to push the clock ahead all the time till it's published, you are being very helpful as my "mentor", and it is greatly appreciated coming from one who has been thru it all. I'll keep you posted on developments re Freedom's answer to me. And then you'll be among the very first to be sent a copy from me in appreciation for all of your good advice during these somewhat hectic times for me, understandably.

Enclosed find document I spoke to you about tonight. I think you'll agree that it is an important revelation about my friend Blakey. The Los Angeles Times are really "hounds" in investigative reporting, aren't they? Incredible!

Very glad to hear that your leg problems/pain are minimal now.

With very best regards,

Bob.

P.S. Please don't circulate this document for now. Thanks. It is, for now, for your edification only at this time. Best.
