Dear Mrs. Brussell,

Scarecrow Press has sent me your letter of June 30th, which I read with interest. I assume that a copy of the Subject Index has gone forward to you and I hope that you will find it useful. Unfortunately, there were some errors and omissions, many of which are my errors or oversights. I am therefore enclosing an errata sheet, with my apologies, and suggest that you write the new entries right on to the page of the Subject Index.

Thank you for your kind words about my article in The Minority of One. Perhaps you will already have seen the July/August issue, which has a fine editorial and also my review of the book Inquest.

I was interested in your description of your work on the case. I, too, have been working on it singlemindedly since November 22, 1963--when I commented bitterly, and with more truth than I realized, that a leftist was certain to be arrested for the assassination--and within an hour, one was! I have written a 500-page comparative analysis of the Warren Report as opposed to the Hearings and Exhibits (I interrupted that work in order to compile the Subject Index). Fortunately, I have no distractions or duties other than to care for a cat and work at a full-time job which does not impose heavy demands on me except at set times of the year. So it has been possible to do concentrated study and writing.

I am intrigued by your statement that the entire way it happened is clear to you and should you feel free to write somewhat more in specific terms, I should of course feel great interest in your findings.

My copy of the Hartogs book was ordered from Doubledays, where I keep an account. They supply books of all publishers.

With best wishes,
