Dear Mr. Kimbrough,

Thank you for your interesting and enjoyable letter of the 11th. If you come East and if I can possibly make time, I will be glad to meet you and talk about the case. As I am one of the researchers who has a full-time job in a completely different field, with rather long office hours, I am often very pressed for time. But I will make every effort to be available.

I am not sure that I am a "liberal" but I am sure that one's personal persuasions, whether political or other, are immaterial so long as the research is objective and evaluation scrupulously divorced from personal inclinations. Those of the critics who want the truth, whatever it may be, and who reject nonsense and falsehoods, from any source, should cooperate without regard to labels. On that basis, I think neither of us is "misguided"!

Kind regards,
