Dear Mr. Tarshish,

Let me try to answer the questions in your letter of the 10th.

The Sept. 1966 and Oct. 1966 articles were excerpts from the ms. of Accessories; none of the other articles in The Minority of One or any other periodicals are included in my book.

My article in Studies on the Left was a review of 4 books on the Warren Report published in mid-1966 by Epstein, Lens, Savage, and Weisberg. The address is 260 W. Bway, NYC 10013.

The article in Latitudes is a series of excerpts from the Warren Report, juxtaposed with corresponding excerpts from the Hearings and Exhibits — which do not correspond, as they should.

The respective titles were "Four Books on the WR: The Summer of Discontent" and "Truth Was Their Only Client." Studies is one dollar a copy.

You ask if your theory could stand examination. The answer is, no. I do not have the time to elaborate why not, it would take 500 pages. No theory can be taken seriously which does not conclusively dispose of the entire body of legitimate evidentiary points embodied in the critics' works. If motive alone was in question, those works would not have been necessary.

I cannot suggest any publisher for your bibliography. Perhaps the American Library Association would give you names of publishers who specialize in bibliographies and the like.

I have no articles in the works. Usually my articles appear in The Minority of One, with very few exceptions.

Now that summer is over, my schedule is extremely tight and I have very little time available. Just the same, I do appreciate your kind invitation and will keep it in mind.

Finally, thank you very much indeed for the Parkland article ("Three Patients"), I will read it with great interest.

Kind regards,

Again, very best
Seymour Weingarten
