

Dear Sir,

1/4/21

A happy new year which I hope will be the forerunner of many more.

Your hesitation about my second letter to Koch made me think. Instinct and experience warned me something was amiss if you were troubled or doubtful about the way I had written about Garrison.

So I started to think, always a dangerous thing to do. And the accompanying rewriting ^(third) is the result.

May I impale on your good will to do it over?

And to let me know first what you think first.

I hope you will approve

Yours
T.
