Dear Mr. Hinckle,

"The Case For Three Assassins" in your January issue is an important contribution to the literature of criticisms of the Warren Report. The data is well-organized and well-written and the documentation appears to be meticulous. Please convey my warm congratulations to David Lifton and David Welsh for their effective attack on the official "evidence" and conclusions, and especially for their analysis of the head shot. The article is a work of scholarship which is all the more forceful for its careful objectivity.

Yours sincerely,
