Dear David,

I am grateful for your letter of the 16th and for the copy of your excellent series in the Capital Times, which I read with much interest and admiration tempered by the conviction that the editors had altered or rearranged your original text to its detriment.

Needless to say, I do greatly appreciate your offer to spread word of the paperback edition of AAF. I have transmitted that part of your letter to Random House with the request that they supply you as soon as possible with any promotional material that may be suitable.

I am glad to hear that you intend to up-date and expand your fine bibliography. It seems to me that you already have all of my published articles, reviews, etc. I have not done anything since the 1971 article on Charles Givens/David Belin, so you would seem to have everything I published.

It is a week today since I was discharged from the hospital, where I was under treatment for acute bronchial asthma. My health has not been very good for the last year or so but I hope for better days.

With cordial good wishes for the Holidays and the New Year,

Sincerely yours,
