N. Eugurier 7-15-75

What They Are Doing Today

By WILLIAM DICK Room Girls" — the close- Rep. Bella Abzug (N.Y.) knit friends who were with night she drowned at Chappaquiddick --- have shot to success since the tragedy. July 18 was the sixth anniversary of Mary Jo's death. And in those six years, two of the "Boiler Room Girls" have become respected lawvers.

Two others have gone far in politics.

Only the fifth hasn't yet made her mark, but she's considering a law career.

They were dubbed the "Boiler Room Girls" by the press because they were working up to 14 hours a day pressuring Defenders Committee in Bos-Democratic delegates to back Senator Robert F. Kennedy during his campaign for the presidency.

The ENQUIRER traced all five to learn what they're doing today.

Esther Newberg, 32, holds one of the most important political posts in New York.

She's executive director of that state's Democratic Committee tion she worked for Sen. Four of the five "Boiler Abraham Ribicoff (Conn.) and

Like the rest of the "Boiler Mary Jo Kopechne the Room Girls," Miss Newberg refuses to talk publicly about Chappaquiddick.

"If I was going to say anything, it wouldn't be to the press."

Rosemary Redmond, 29, is a lawyer with one of Boston's top law firms.

"Cricket" The former Keough married Paul Redmond, an attorney who represented all the "Boiler Room Girls" at the inquest into Mary Jo Kopechne's death.

"My friend is dead - period. It's not an issue of public interest," she says of Chappaquiddick.

Mary Ellen Lyons, 33, is an attorney for the Massachusetts ton.

Previously she worked in the prestigious law office of Gerard Doherty, who was a close associate of Senator Edward Kennedy.

These days she spends most of her time representing young people in Boston Juvenile Court.

In her office overlooking a tiny cemetery on the edge of Boston Common, Miss Lyons Before assuming her posi-|said she will never publicly

BOILER ROOM GIRLS walk to the airport terminal at Edgartown, Mass., on January 8, 1970, after testifying at Mary Jo Kopechne's inquest. They are (from left) Rose-mary Keough, Mary Ellen Lyons, Nance Lyons, Susan Tannenbaum, Esther Newberg, Susan Tannenbaum, 30, re-cently took charge of the Washington, D.C., office of Connecticut Gov. Ella T. Gras-SO.

Before that she was an assistant to presidential prospect Sen. Walter Mondale (D.-Minn.).

"There's nothing more to be said about Chappaquiddick — not by me," she said as she stood for a moment in front of the modern office building where she works.

Nance Lyons, 32, the sister discuss Chappaquiddick — "not now, not ever!" of Mary Ellen, is the least suc-such from a vacation trip to Europe cessful of the "Boiler Room and she is now considering Girls" from a career stand- entering law school probably point.

She lives with her wealthy parents in a fashionable neigh-borhood on the outskirts of when asked about Chappaquid-Boston. Recently she returned dick.

in the fall. "I have nothing to say about