Dear Mr. Welsh,

I apologize for peppering you with letters about the same matter and I hope this will be the last one.

Over the weekend I tried to correlate the copy of the manuscript which had been in your custody with the master copy by incorporating the various changes and additions. During the page-by-page correlation I discovered that a 23-page section was missing from the copy you returned. It is a section that I sent you shortly after sending the main manuscript, consisting of a chapter on the "auto demonstration" (mailed to you on 22 January 1966 with covering note) and a series of short chapters dealing with "the two Oswalds; the furniture shop; the barber; the grocer; death and misadventure," etc. (mailed to you on 30 January 1966).

If you can possibly locate those pages, it will save me retyping the 23 pages. I am sorry to cause you this additional bother.

Again, thanks for your cooperation.

Yours sincerely,

Sylvia Meagher
