Dear Mr. Rennar,

Thank you for your letter of the 16th. I appreciate your understanding attitude of my rather blunt remarks on the subject of Garrison. I only wish I could agree that the critics of the WR continue to have much in common, despite diametrical differences on the New Orleans "investigation," and that cooperation is still possible and desirable. Without wishing to belabor the point, I see no scope for cooperation with proponents of the false and fraudulent Warren Report or with proponents of any other false and fraudulent project purporting to "solve" the Dallas tragedy.

Certainly I have no hesitation in detailing my position on Garrison for your readership, although I should like to avoid writing a new piece for that purpose. I am therefore enclosing three letters to editors (a fourth letter in the group is purely for your own information and not for quotation), in the hope that you can excerpt from their contents a brief, coherent account for use in Forum. I apologize for imposing this burden on you.

Let me add a word of clarification with regard to Oswald's attendance at the Garry Powers trial at Moscow. I had mentioned to Epstein that I recalled having read somewhere in the testimony or documents a comment to that effect, in my first reading of the Hearings & Exhibits (back in 1964-1965). At that time, the information did not have the relevance or significance it has recently acquired; and I did not annotate or index it. After the passage of time, I do not recall just where in the 26 volumes I found this mention; nor do I have the time or energy to make a methodical search. I can only say that I have a firm recollection that such a remark is somewhere in the testimony, or possibly in an exhibit.

I was pleased to learn that you had done a review of my book and if it is no trouble I would appreciate a copy of the parts published in Forum and/or the review as submitted. Thank you also for your offer to make available your documentation on the Right-Wing, which I shall keep in mind.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
