Dear Tom,

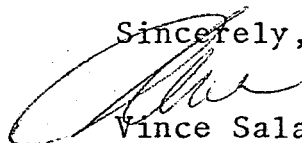

I tried to reach you by phone, but you apparently don't feel a need to "examine ideas, probe minds, influence thoughts" to the extent that you would provide a listed phone number for intellectually stimulated persons to contact you.

I am willing to provide you with an appointment at my office for two hours of time to answer your questions. To the extent that your questions can be answered in two hours, I will donate that amount of time. My wife will not endure any further discussion of the case in my home.

Kindly call me, if you wish to discuss the matter, and I will fit you into my schedule. You may think me a snob for arranging to restrict your time to two hours, but I am extremely busy, and any hour added to my schedule is a burden.

Please advise.

Sincerely,

Vince Salandria

P.S. Frankly, I am at a loss to explain why a person who is so certain about the defects of my thinking is so eager to rehash this tired old subject with me.
