Dear Mr. Daub,

A Mrs. Cann of the National Enquirer called me on Friday afternoon saying that she had been in touch with Scarecrow and had been told that my Subject Index was out of print and no longer available. While I am pleased, of course, that the first edition has been sold out, and that the Index is being used by networks, magazines, newspapers, and students of the Warren Report, I am regretful at the same time that requests for the Index (including my own recent request for five copies) no longer can be met.

I should appreciate it if you would let me know whether you are considering the publication of a second edition of the Subject Index. Frankly, I would not look forward to taking on additional work on the Index, on top of the work still ahead of me on the galleys and page proofs of my full-length book on the Warren Report which will be published in the fall by Bobbs-Merrill (and other commitments). However, since the Index seems to be serving as a valuable research tool, as I had hoped, and remains subject to demand which may increase should a new investigation be authorized, I would of course undertake any extra work needed for another edition.

There are a number of additions and corrections (see enclosed Errata sheet) which would have to be incorporated if the Index is reissued; and perhaps a number of refinements and elaborations which would serve to make the Index a more precise instrument.

Therefore, if you do lean towards issuing a second edition, please let me know as soon as possible. It is difficult for me to make toll calls from my office switchboard but do feel free to telephone me there (212 Plaza 4-1234, ext 2024) at any time. Meanwhile, I do hope that my request for five copies of the Index came to you in time to be filled. With kind personal regards,

Yours sincerely,
