

1 July 68

Dear Mrs Meagher,

Just a reminder, as it would be an irony should you have forgotten this by the time of your 8 July WLCY appearance:

As you would probably find yourself making references to the 26, it might be interesting to a number of listeners to learn that there is a set of the 26 right at their own St Pete central library. And, what's more - that a copy of your Index (a rare animal) is there also.

Thanks.

Just to bug you: Consider that at this point the very best that could happen might be to have the W/R declared, by Federal Proclamation, as being Holy and legally binding. Few things will attract indignant attention like a lousy law - and attention is certainly what is needed. As for it being "a travesty of justice", it would be in the first place just one more pea in a peafield of such travesties - and would in the second place be a travesty brought on not by the people on the street, but by hidden pressures from anonymous groups.*

*In speculating on the advantages of having the W/R declared Holy, I am counting on the likelihood of a countryful of lawyers thereafter referring back to this W/R decision as a precedence in matters not relating to the JFK assn, and thereby assuring continuing controversy and interest in it. A decision declaring that a certain thing did happen is one thing, but ~~###~~ one declaring (in one way or another, depending on the wording) that therefore another thing could not have happened - and that all evidence tending to support the latter is dismissed as erroneous before it is even heard... well, that would be quite another thing. It seems almost impossible that any such decision could come to pass. But in the meantime I would be in favor of letting anonymous leaders make their own bed, noting recently how too disorganized they seem to be in their bed-making.
