Dear Mr. Striso,

Scarecrow Press has forwarded your very interesting letter of the 3rd; I trust they are sending you a copy of the Subject Index (errata sheet enclosed herewith, with apologies).

You will find an interview with Manolo Ray in Commission Exhibit No. 3148 and perhaps in other documents cited in my index under "Odio, Sylvia" on page 129. I did not include a separate listing for Ray, as the index necessarily is selective. Incidentally, Ray was never questioned by the Warren Commission itself, according to the published record.

I do thank you most warmly for your generous remarks about my article in Esquire. I have a book review essay in the current issue of Studies on the Left; and articles in The Minority of One of June, July-August, September, and October 1966. I think you might find the October article, "Oswald and the State Department," of interest.

By all means, give me a call (preferably after the General Assembly closes on the 20th) at Plaza 4-1234 ext 2024. I would be delighted to have a talk with you.

With kind regards,

Sylvia Meagher
