Dear Sylvia:

Your reply elucidated the flaccid tissue of Belim's "argument" and exposed the gangrene within.

Mr. Belim had Power for a client and he simply acted in the corporate manner of one in the chain of command. No "vast conspiracy". Merely the reflex action of any organization man.

His attempt to defame the indefensible will probably not be repeated.

As for P. Jones, he has fallen from the name to the name.

The enclosure from an L.A. Paper merely suggests the evidential prestidigitation involved.

Sincerely,

EO

P.S.

This major story has received minor, deceptive and vague coverage.

The ballistic tests lack probability. Evidence vanishes and exhibits are destroyed.

The investigation is headed by a crime - palmography specialist and the probable scapegoat appears to be a clerk.

Fantastic!
