Dear Sylvia,

As always, it was good to hear your voice again. Sorry to hear of the medical complications

I have no doubt that "The Assassinations" are at least a contributing factor.

A study of "The Assassinations" - and the knowledge of their implications - alienates one from the comfortable world that appears to be and casts the psyche into "the unreal that is --- a nightmare realm that without pity shatters all illusion and scars the soul.

You glimpse America - its reality - in those six records and hear the individual in the shadows of the Mural.

What we were before Nov. 22, 1963 we will never be again.

Matt SAGE made a very profound observation (if barely understood!) when he declared, "I've learned more than I wanted to know!"

Was it worth it?
I think so.

After all, who could ever miss Neal's wonderful explanation that "They could only do the same for Bob as for Jack."

My sincere hopes for a swift recovery.

Always,
