Dear Sylvia,

Thank you for your copy of the letter to Cyril Wecht and 'The Voice' enclosure.

Of course, Garrison's "Rush To Judgment" critique of accessories overlooks the 'minor point' that history is details. The rest is art or artiface.

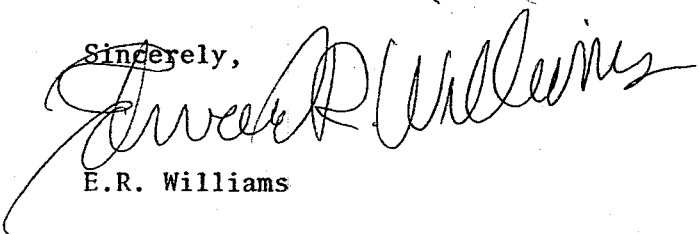

It would appear to me that Cyril has become a 'pale imitation' of Sahl/Salandra/Lane/Garrison.

Even his medical judgements are erratic in his disregard of the death certificate to say nothing of his fantastic non-medical observations such as the allegation that Tippitt was assigned to kill Oswald.

He has joined the flock, a late comer.

Recent studies (Scott's 'The War Conspiracy') and his essay in volume V of the Pentagon papers, Halberstam's 'The Best and the Brightest) tend to vindicate but perhaps it's simply too late.

Sincerely,

E.R. Williams
