

Dear Bill,

3/26/93

Reur 22: Bert Griffen, at least from his post-Commission record, may be the best of them but there is I believe no excuse for any of them. They were silent while the time cried out lie! and shame! No competent, impartial lawyer can read the Warren Report and believe it, it is that simple.

Few men are as short as Dean Andrews was and it is no easy matter to get as round. But the lobby is so small there will be no problem. And few leave that early. Schedule is OK and I hope I'm up to it. But I should knock off in time to be abed by about 7.

Questions are no problem.

Our only dogs were unintended matings except for one wonderful bench-legged beagle. The mongrels were fine and we loved them. The McKnights have some fine show French poodles.

If you send books to Griffen may I suggest that you lend him the first and ask for any refutation. Lend it.

I'd love that beer tray with the Indians hanged in it! And he'd show it! Even a picture, I think.

What I need moved should be thawed by the time you are here, thanks. A bank of snow in the turnaround, the only way the lane could be cleared with a blade on a truck.

You are right-it was then known as the highway lobby. I remember now.

We do not know Barbara Mertz. She was one of the first defenders of Meachum and after I replied to her she has been publicly silent on him and the issues.

Sol, if I did not tell you, was one of the young lawyers, I should have said youngest, on the Senate Civil Liberties Committee staff. We've been friends since.

My experience with judges is that virtually all make up rules.

To the best of my knowledge McCloy agreed to only two interviews and he knew what they would be. No risk. Confirms what I believe about him, he knew what he was doing.

I think that both you and your audience would enjoy it if you speak to the UK law school. There is, I admit, reason to believe the man in the Altgens picture may not have been Oswald. But I think that what I printed makes out a reasonable case that it was. But ought it not have been really investigated?

If Stone did not disagree he had no movie, did he? Flexible fact goes with flexible ethics, morals and words.

I've checked with the Red Horse. The ~~me~~ coffee shop opens at 6:00.

Our best to you both,

Harold
