Dear Harold:

I am leaving at 6:30 this evening for Washington and will arrive at 10:30. I have reservations at the Continental Hotel in Union Station Plaza, and have no doubt that I will stay there.

I have a number of things to take care of in Washington tomorrow (Thursday), and want to devote all day ~~Thursday~~ Friday to clearing the McNutt matter as well as other things that I want you to handle as my Washington correspondent.

I should like very much to be able to be home on Saturday morning, and I should be grateful to you if you could make it your business to be in Washington as early as possible on Thursday. We can spend Thursday evening, at any rate, on the McNutt story and have it ready for Friday morning. I have a tentative layout which I am taking along with me.

Upon receipt of this communication, would you be good enough to wire me at the Continental Hotel and let me know at what time you will arrive? From what you told me on the phone the other day, I assume that you will be there at the scheduled hour. (Early Thursday Evening)

Incidentally, I am registering under the name signed below, not under my pen name.

Kindest regards.

Sincerely,

Alex J. Whyman
