Dear Al,

Enclosed are the Morgenthau piece, his photo, and several other pieces of paper. I told you just about everything there is to say about the piece itself over the phone today.

About the pieces of paper, these are quotes from earlier statements of his. The cannot be used as quotes. My purpose in sending them to you is so that you can, if you want to, use them in captions. In these captions you can say that he said that, and then use the stuff if you want to, but if you do, dont quote it directly.

In the text, you will notice that the month mentioned in connection with the monthly quota is July. This can be changed, because this is now the regular monthly quota. I don't know what month you want to put in.

I would suggest that in any editorial note you may use, you give him a good, big plug. Remember, he has the biggest money-raising job in history. He's got an awful big hunk of the war on his hands, and a goodly chunk of morale, and he is never heard of, much. Anyway, they are doing a good job.

Over.

In the letter I sent you last night I had a small expense account, something like $1.55. In the expense account I sent you yesterday there was an expense account for about a dollar and a half. Please add to it cabs 80 cents and typing $1.65.

Remember, I'm going to have proofs Monday morning.

Regards,

Harold Weisberg
