Memorandum on the transfer of American Ships to Foreign Registry

Background: During the special session of Congress, convened to pass a neutrality act, the Neutrality Act was passed, providing, in part, that after the President issued the mecessary proclamations and defined Sombat areas, "thereafter it shall be unlawful except under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed, for any citizen of the United States or any American vessel to proceed into or through any such combat area." On the 3rd of November the session adjourned. On the 7th the United States Lines requested permission to transfer 9 ships to the Panamanian registry. to thus circumvent the neutrality laws just enacted and to proceed into European waters and do business with the beligerents. Secretary of State Hull immediately and in no uncertain manner announced his opposition to the proposal. He called it an impairment of the integrity of the Act, and he so informed the Maritime Commission. Nonetheless, the transfers that here began soon were so numerous that within a six-month period they were four times as great as during the preceeding year. The Maritime Commission reported that from October 1938 to October 1939 there were but 88 tansfers of this nature. This included tugs, barges and yachts. of these 88 transfers, 15 were oil tankers tamasfered by Standard Oil subsequent to the outbreak of the European war.

The statistics which follow are for the period beginning October 26, 1939, and ending April 30, 1940.

	L60	Tonnage 5 86,758.2 9
Total to Allies	93	303.779.00
Belgium	3	303,779.00 68, 677.00
Britain	39	151,245.00
Canada		31,845.00
France	19	49.229.00
Newfoundland	1	136.00
	1	2.647.00

Of these ships 21 were transfered to Panamanian registry, having a total tonnage of 101,738. There were none to Germany. Of all the ships except those which went to Panamanian registry only 45 did not go to the Allies (there was, in addition to those in the table, I ship transfered to Honduran registry, which is British. Itsweight was but 37 tons so I left it out of the table).

These are the totals, by month. You will note that by far the largest was in February, when 220,200 tons were transfered.
