Dear Mr. Weisberg:

Can you check this on the matter of admissions to West Point; previously, a quota existed for Regular Army and National Guard, with each getting about an equal number. Now that the National Guard is within the Army of United States, does the same procedure hold? In other words, does a former National Guardsman go through the same procedure outlined in the regular Army booklet on West Point applications. Or what is the present situation on this point?

Best regards.

How does an enlisted man today try for admission?
