Dear Harold:

Alex is out for a few days with an overdose of sunburn from last weekend. However, I read your letter to him over the phone and sent Morgenthau's article via messenger to soothe his burning. Result: He's beginning to feel so good he promises to come back to the office either tomorrow or Friday.

Alex will write you about the Morgenthau article just as soon as he does come back, and he'll also write you about that army general story. I think he may be planning to go down to Washington soon to see Lieutenant Shubert about it.

Regards from both of us.

Sincerely,

Frances
