Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I have enclosed a letter I wrote to Harrison Edward Livingstone that mentions you by name, as does his book, so I thought it appropriate to send you a copy. I know you will be disappointed when I tell you that I have read several of the recent conspiracy books, and, even though I agree with you that most, if not all of these people are doing it for a buck, I think it is important for me to know what they are saying so as to steer people in a more productive direction. In addition, once in a while there is one idea I had not previously thought of. It also gives me a chance to respond directly to them if they have any willingness to listen.

I have read Crenshaw's book and find most of it rehash of already stated "information," and the heart of what he has to say that is in any way new could have been contained in a magazine article. Although I was not in his position, in light of what you went through, I find his excuse for not "coming out" earlier, that it would have ruined his career, somewhat lame.

I am still working on getting you a transcription of Michael Hurwitz's interviews with Oswald's landlady, and others who were previously not interviewed, or gave little information previously. Hurwitz, you may recall, is the owner of "Manuscript Investments," a dealer in collectibles, who owns two Mannlicher-Carcanos within five serial numbers of "Oswald's". As soon as I receive my copy, I will order one to send to Jim Lesar who has agreed to transcribe it for you. I am also working on getting Michael Hurwitz to sign a statement about the procurement and ownership of his Mannlichers that I will forward a copy of to you and Mr. Lesar. Mr. Hurwitz is scheduled to speak, at my request, at Dublin High School, where I teach history, before about 500 juniors taking American History. His approach is relatively balanced and he makes nothing from it, even on he tapes.

I continue to provide your flyers to B Daulton Bookstore in Westerville, where I live, for cusomters who ask for more material, and refer others to your books at your address.

In addition, I hope that you are feeling better and your sleep condition improves. In the Maryland/Pennsylvania Luterhan tradition in which I was raised, I have had you included in our weekly prayers.

I know you have a lot to do, so I'll stop at this point. God bless you.

Sincerely,
