

Harold:

May it not be long
Till that happy day
When the best of health
Returns to stay.

You are in our thoughts and prayer.

Sincerely,
Mike & Barb, Sarah & Matthew

Dear Mike,

Over the years we have been blessed with the good wishes and prayers of others. It means much to us and we do appreciate it.

But I do not recall any nicer than yours.

We do thanks you very much.

I hope your audience approves the show you taped.

The list you requested is enclosed.

Again, thanks.

With all best wishes,

Harold Weisberg

Thanks also for the return-addressed envelope.

Your thoughtful and attractive card is in today's mail. The picture is beautiful and carries us back to when we farmed and raised Canadian "wild" geese, the honkers in flight on the card. We were able to earn their trust to the point where the ganders as well as the geese would eat from my mouth without biting me and would come when I called them. They also brought their young to the house to be fed. As a species they are wonderful creatures and we loved them. This story you (pl) might find interesting: If you are old enough to remember Continental Bakery advertised its Wonder Bread as "Building strong bodies three (I think) ways." One of the mated pairs hatched three goslings. I named them after the Rice Krispies commercial of Snap, Crackle and Pop and wanted to get a picture of them eating Rice Krispies. But they would not touch the stuff! So I devised a trick. I put cracker/corn under the Rice Krispies. You should have seen them dive into it. But neither Rice Krispies nor Continental could go for such TV advertising in those days before the use of animals in them was commonplace.
