MESSAGE THIS SIDE

keep going to 8 p.m. Lights are supposed to go out at 9 so will have less than an hour a day for all the things there are for a soldier to do. That is, if the schedule is kept. Also, I suspect we are in for further reorganization. I'm feeling pretty well this morning but a few minutes before noon. The mail hasn't come in yet, but in hoping it comes in soon. I'm anxious to hear from you. It is now a week since I've got a letter, & that's a long time. But, there should be quite a bit of it when it comes. After I wrote you yesterday I started to go into town but the rain got worse so I couldn't. I went to the movies & see "The Woman is Worth" but by the time I got there it was sold out. So I came back to the barracks & on the way bumped into a fellow who came up here with me the first time. We haven't seen for a long time, so returned to the barracks. Missed

in all, a very gloomy & dull evening. In the afternoon commute up the radio. We listened to the mass instead of the Philharmonic then to the NBC Symphony. I was surprised at the number who wanted to listen to such music, but even more at the number who, like myself, gave up supper to hear Toscanini & Valerian Provincy in Tchaikovsky's Piano concerto! No more soon; the news Last Harold.
