Dear Jerry

In your note you ask me the names and addresses of 2-3 assassination experts who did not like JFK personally or his policies, or both.

I've never been asked this before. It also reflects an incorrect view of criticism of the official mythology about the assassination. That has nothing to do with whether or not people liked JFK. But in thinking about it I can recall only one and he is dead, Bud Fensterwald. and he was liberal who disliked all the Kennedys.

I do not ever recall discussing this with anyone, whether or not experts.

So on that basis I can't answer your question.

Of the Members of the Warren Commission, <sup>conservative</sup> Senator Russell did not. Yet he disagreed with the single-bullet theory vehemently while the most liberal Member of the Commission, Earl Warren, presided over the white<sup>u</sup>ashing and the covering up and did at least on the record agree with that theory that is an absolute basis of their report.

Of the members of the staff, <sup>conservative</sup> Fsecter was a member of ADA when he joined it, did the very dirtiest of the staff dirty work, and then became a Republican and was politically successful.

Without the help of the then most conservative publisher in the country I would not have been able to get Whitewash printed. By as conservative a printer as there was in the land. who were

But professional liberals would have nothing to do with me or my book then.

Mary Ferrell is one of the original critics. She is also probably the most conservative. We've spent weeks in each others homes and I do not recall her ever mentioning what she thinks about Kennedy. Or any of the other original Dallas critics, not one of whom was other than conservative. One was a Kluxer.

When you talk about experts you also get into a hairy area.

Mary is not well, by the way, and her husband is in terminal illness so she would not take the time to respond if you wrote her.

I do not believe you can get anything constructive with any ~~see~~ such approach or thinking. My belief is that most of those I know through this work are conservative to quite conservative.

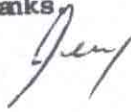

Best,

Harold

Harold: Please let me know the names
(with their addresses, if you have them) of
2-3 assassination experts who didn't like JFK -- personally, or his policies, or both.
Thanks.
